In the Puppet Musical workshop series, students are asked for their creative input from the start to finish of this workshop. Students build their own puppet, decide on their puppet's voice, movement, style and individual characteristics. Students learn the art of puppetry through hands-on activities that include improvisation, storytelling, movement and voicework. Through brainstorming and storyboarding the students learn songs and then create a story around the songs to perform later. Student input is essential to this workshop series. "I create a safe space of respect for the workshop's framework and the students are encouraged to creatively flourish. My goal is to provide guidelines and structure. It is the student's experience, ideas and input that will drive this project."
